Local People Receive More Pension Checks

(Special to the Times-Virginian)

NEW YORK, June 11 — With each passing year, an increasing number of men, women and children in Appomattox County are benefiting from money that was collected from payrolls in the past 20-odd years.

The amounts deducted, with matching payments by employers, were set aside to provide funds for retirement and for other future needs.

As a result, 1,008 local residents are now receiving monthly checks from the social security trust funds. The majority of them are retired workers, their wives, widows, children and parents. Others are disabled workers and their dependents.

As an indication of the rate at which the program has been expanding, the number of county residents who were receiving checks a mere three years ago was only 778.

The increase since then amounts to 30 percent.

Frequent liberalization of the program is the principal reason for the rise in number of beneficiaries. With each change, additional groups of people are brought under coverage.

The figures, recently released by the Social Security Administration, show that residents of Appomattox County were collecting monthly checks, as of the beginning of this year, at the rate of $969,184 a year.

By way of comparison, their receipts three years ago were only $320,948.

For the individual beneficiary, the average was $944, which was 12.5 percent more than at that time.

The comparable rise was 7.1 percent in the United States and 7.7 percent in the State of Virginia.

The social security program has mushroomed in size and in importance to the point where it has become a considerable factor in the national economy.

The number of people who are now receiving monthly checks has passed the 17 million mark.

Nearly 12 million of them are 65 or over. Of the others, 1 million are disabled workers and their dependents, 2.5 million are widowed mothers and children, and the remainder are beneficiaries between 62 and 65.

They are collecting close to $15 billion a year, nearly all of which is promptly put back into circulation via the local stores and businesses.
